INTRODUCTION

This report provides a summary and analysis by Queensland electoral district of socio-demographic data drawn from the 2006 Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) Census of Population and Housing Usual Resident data. Other tables include enrolment data provided by the Australian Electoral Commission and enrolment projections developed by the Electoral Commission Queensland.

Census Enumeration Day was 8 August 2006. The 89 electoral districts shown are those created by the Queensland Redistribution Commission (QRC) at the redistribution proclaimed on 20 August 2008.

A consolidated table of electoral district characteristics is presented on pages 4 and 5. Individual electoral district statistical profiles are presented in a standard format in alphabetical order in Section A from page 7 to 95. Data included in the profile includes Age, Total Aged 18+, Population Movement, Australian Citizens by Age, Total Australian Citizens 18 +, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders 18+, Birthplace, Language Spoken at Home, Internet Usage, Enrolment Figures, Predicted Enrolment Figures and Electoral Density.

Section B contains a series of consolidated tables showing 14 select descriptive statistics (including enrolment data) in paired (a) and (b) tables. The first table (a) in each series lists electoral districts in alphabetical order and shows either the absolute or relative (%) value of each attribute (area, total population, enrolment, % overseas born etc). The second table (b) in each paired series ranks the 89 electoral districts in order of absolute or relative value of the particular attribute.

The aggregate socio-demographic data derived from the census provide useful indicators of the group characteristics of whole populations within the territorially-defined limits of the 89 individual electoral districts.

Because the attribute variables are standardised, they provide a useful means of comparing one electoral district (and the group characteristics of its associated political community) with another. Ranking districts according to attribute value provides a useful illustration of the distribution and variability of particular socio-demographic characteristics across districts.

Section C is a table for the whole State to assist with comparisons. It provides a breakdown of the entire State for each of the selected data sets for the Profile.

This data is used for the Electoral Commission's planning and development purposes in the interests of improving the quality of electoral services provided for Queenslanders.
