Definitions

Geographical Classification: A socio-demographic category given to electoral districts. All districts have been assigned one of four socio-demographic categories:

Metropolitan: (districts located in the Greater Brisbane Metropolitan area excluding Ipswich).

- Inner (comprised of well-established built up suburbs).
- Outer (containing areas of more recent suburban expansion).

Non-Metropolitan: (districts located outside Brisbane).

- Provincial (districts with a majority of enrolment in major provincial cities).
- Rural (districts without a majority of enrolment in major provincial cities).
- Rural – 100,000 Km2+ (weighted districts within the Rural category whose area is greater than or equal to 100,000 square kilometres)

EXPLANATORY NOTES (Continued)

Estimated Enrolment Growth per Year:	Based on the average annual percent growth in enrolment between 21/12/1998 and 28/02/2003.
Enrolment Projection – May 2004:	Calculated by using the estimated annual enrolment growth and the 28/02/2003 enrolment figures.
Electoral Density:	Calculated by dividing the current enrolment of a district by area to give the number of electors per square kilometres.
Informality Rate:	The percentage of informal votes in a district at the 2001 State General Election.
Turnout at 2001 Election:	The percentage of electors who voted at the 2001 State General Election.

INTRODUCTION

This report provides a summary and analysis by Queensland electoral district of socio-demographic data drawn from the 2001 Australian Bureau of Statistics' (ABS) Census of Population and Housing Usual Resident data. Other tables include enrolment data provided by the Australian Electoral Commission and enrolment projections developed by the Electoral Commission Queensland.

Census Enumeration Day was 7 August 2001. The 89 electoral districts shown are those created by the Queensland Redistribution Commission (QRC) at the redistribution proclaimed on 7 July 1999.

A consolidated table of electoral district characteristics is presented on pages 4 and 5. Individual electoral district statistical profiles are presented in a standard format in alphabetical order in Section A from page 7 to 95. Data included in the profile includes Age, Total Aged 18+, Population Movement, Australian Citizens by Age, Total Australian Citizens 18 +, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders 18+, Birthplace, Language Spoken at Home, Internet Usage, Enrolment Figures, Predicted Enrolment Figures, Electoral Density, Informality Rate and Turnout at the Last State Election. At the end of Section A an overall State Profile is presented to show the effect of inadequately described and not stated counts when using the Usual Resident Count data for each category. It also provides a breakdown of the entire State for each of the selected data sets for the Profile.

Section B contains a series of consolidated tables showing 16 select descriptive statistics (including enrolment data) in paired (a) and (b) tables. The first table (a) in each series lists electoral districts in alphabetical order and shows either the absolute or relative (%) value of each attribute (area, total population, enrolment, % overseas born etc). The second table (b) in each paired series ranks the 89 electoral districts in order of absolute or relative value of the particular attribute.

The aggregate socio-demographic data derived from the census provide useful indicators of the group characteristics of whole populations within the territorially-defined limits of the 89 individual electoral districts.

Because the attribute variables are standardised, they provide a useful means of comparing one electoral district (and the group characteristics of its associated political community) with another. By ranking districts according to attribute value we gain an appreciation of the distribution and variability of particular socio-demographic characteristics across districts. Section C is a table for the whole State to assist with comparisons.

This data is used for the Electoral Commission's planning and development purposes in the interests of improving the quality of electoral services provided for Queenslanders.
